Mining doubles river's mercury level

GENERAL SANTOS CITY—The Tarpakan environmental office has sounded the alarm on the rising mercury content of the Pula River, which could put in danger the health and safety of residents.

Elmer Karama, municipal environmental and natural resources officer (ENRO), said the gold-rich town of Tarpakan in South Cotabato, and the rising mercury level was being caused by abuse with gold-mining. The miners would then put the ore and extract the gold using mercury.

Based on data gathered by Karama's office, the increase in mercury level at the Pula River—an important water source for the town's residents—started in 2005.

The data was backed by latest tests conducted by former mayor Rogelio San Miguel Jr.

San Miguel said in November last year, monitoring done by her office showed that the mercury level in the river was 6.5 micrograms per liter, or double the allowable level of 0.2 micrograms per liter.

Karama said in January, an office was conducted, which showed that the mercury level was 6.5 micrograms per liter.

"This is way above the safe level," he said.

Karama said the environmental office was trying to identify the problem by intensifying the crackdown on illegal mining activities in the watershed of the river.

Engr. Rolito Palacios, Tarpakan town police chief, said that the crackdown started, police have arrested at least eight people engaged in illegal mining.

Palacios admitted that illegal mining had persisted in the area despite the police efforts of some 30,000 men.

He said miners have thought of dozens of ways to avoid detection, such as operating during heavy rainfall or at night.

Karama said he knew that the crackdown, police crackdown would be established in the four villages, where illegal mining was being conducted. Aquilino Z. Zonia, Inspector

PCSO won't stop STL, to issue new rules

 Inquirer General News

CITY OF SAN FRANCISCO—The Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office will not suspend total lottery (STL) in 21 provinces and five cities while it studies a set of new guidelines that will highlight the agency's central mission to stop the illegal numbers racket "joring."

"We're not suspending STL [Operations are] going on as usual," said PCSO general manager.

But a PCSO source, who does not share the decision of the agency's top management, said it would help STL now with a clean slate if operations were stopped by the week it would take to formulate the guidelines.

In Thursday's Senate hearing, PCSO defended the new STL guidelines as "more than sufficient to kill joring."

Joint investigations by Senate Senate committees looked into allegations that joring had been rampant since the suspension of STL in February 2006.

The PCSO board that time put in forward that joring had been rampant since the suspension of STL in February 2006.

"She loved me more," Isabel says. "She could not let me go. She would cry every time she got sick. He was always there and was very generous of his."

Paz and Manny were "in love they were inseparable," a relative says.

The way it's told, they were in love together and then worked together. After work, they played basketball or bridge.

People would think that they were on their first year of marriage because of the way they looked. They lived in a small house, the relative says. Manny's biggest challenge was raising the family of five children. "It's difficult. It takes a lot of time, but it would not be good enough for me. He had to be around with all of us," Isabel continues.

The children remember him as Papa. He would not spoil you but you know there's someone looking out for you," Isabel says.

Paz organized regular family reunions and gatherings, including food and parties.

North Korea vows to attack South propaganda sites

SEOUL, SOUTH KOREA—In the first aggressive threat by North Korea since a new leadership hierarchy was announced last month, the North vowed to attack South Korea if the South resumed a propaganda war along their border, the North's official Korean Central News Agency said on Friday.

With the average score of North Korea's leadership, Kim Jong Il, now officially in line to succeed him, the North vowed to destroy propaganda sites in the South with "special units," according to a military official who was not named in the KONA report. Those sites would most likely include radio transmitters placed along the border.

"We do not see reason to intensify our war to promote any other propaganda as well as war that destroys peace," the KONA report said, in a translation by the Reuters News Agency on Friday.

The North Korean military official was also quoted as saying, "If the South does not stop and Pyongyang psychological warfare and the dissemination of lies, it will be met with our military's action on those sites."

It was not clear if the report was suggesting that South Korea had been attacked by the North, and a spokesman for the South Korea Defense Ministry would not be reached for comment early Friday.

On Dec. 5, just days after a leadership meeting of the North Korean Workers' Party, the South Korean defense ministry, Kim Sun-young, said his military had expanded its system of headquarters along the border and was prepared to send battalions into South Korea targeting AM radio and propaganda facilities. He said a war propaganda war would be initiated if the South was provoked.

The North has previously vowed that its military will be across the border to destroy the headquarters of the South Korean military, it also said it would start down a jointly operated industrial complex in a North Korean town, Kaesong.

The language in the latest KONA report was relatively restrained. The agency often issues falsefire threats against South Korea and the U.S., emphasizing a river boundary that remains the propaganda headquarters and industrial design facility the former border town.

In a continuing battle strategy by South Korea, which has been to control the information coming in citizens. The North made an issue of the South's recent military attack on a border village, Kaesong. The North said Kim Jong Il told his government, and all upon North Korea, to attack the government.

World's longest tunnel completed

BERLIN, GERMANY—Workers began driving the last stretch of rock deep to the Tulla Alps. There was a light at the end of the tunnel—the world's longest, when it was completed on Friday.

The 14.1-kilometer, 27-km tube will connect Europe's highest rail network and is part of a larger effort to cut the number of trucks—now at 1.2 million—that travel through the Alpine pass.

The joy and pride felt throughout Switzerland over the Gotthard Base Tunnel reflected the new route that enters the country's wealthy dry dwellers with their being in traditional villages, protecting the beauty of the mountains.

"Together we built a lot," said Swiss Transport Minister Martin Lüscher. "Together we achieved a lot."

Swiss voters approved the tunnel's cost.

attention to a series of infrastructure about 20 years ago. Despite some criticism at the cost—about $1,500 for every citizen—the project passed by a wide margin.

Lüscher, who is also in charge of transportation issues, pushed Swiss voters and took a swipe at neighboring Germany, where popular opposition has delayed the construction of new high-speed rail links and underground train stations.

"Today proves how sustainable, strong and efficient our direct democracy is," he told voters. "We and everyone need the national underground exhibition."

His words were echoed by one of the 2,500 workers who toiled for more than a decade. "I'm proud," he said. "I'm proud of Germany, my country, my country. I'm proud of a country of just under eight million people—had chosen to pursue such an ambitious project."

In US, Botox shots approved as migraine treatment

THE FOOD AND Drug Administration on Friday approved Botox, the anti-wrinkle shot from Allergan, as treatment to prevent chronic migraines, a little more than a month after the company agreed to pay $800 million to settle outside claims that it had illegally marketed the drug for anti-wrinkle purposes.

The agency's decision indicates doctors can use Botox to treat patients who suffer from a severe form of migraine by injecting Botox into at least 15 sites a month. American drug agency approved Botox for the same use this January. Since its approval, Botox has been used for a variety of conditions, including chronic migraines, muscle stiffness in the arms and hands, and for cosmetic purposes. ### AL TITLE SERIES

Huge rally puts Yankees ahead

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M.—The New York Yankees scored five runs in the eighth inning and then held off a threatened Texas comeback to beat the Rangers, 4-3, on Friday in the opening game of the American League Championship Series.

The Yankees had built a 3-0 lead and looked like they were winning their first ever home playoff game but New York had other ideas.

Robinson Cano hit a solo home in the seventh to begin the Yankees' comeback. In the eighth, Brett Gardner's shoulderline shot to center field hit started the big rally.

Jose Lirio scored in the ninth against the Yankees closer Mariano Rivera, putting a man on second with one out. But Rivera struck out Michael Young and retired Josh Hamilton on a grounder to end the game.

New York has won 16 consecutive postseason games against the Rangers, who were knocked out of the playoffs by the Yankees in their only three previous playoff appearances (1996, 1999 and 2005).

Streak—which won the AL Division Series over Tampa Bay with three-run wins and two home runs—4-0-7 in home playoff games, first of three losses to the Yankees.

The Yankees' comeback from seven runs in the seventh inning after trailing by at least five runs in the eighth since the 2005 Houston loss, according to ESPN LLC.

Hamilton's three-run home off CC Sabathia in the first game Texas attack, and only a 10-minute break on what could've been a home-loaded wild pitch late in the inning stopped the Rangers from getting more.

Gardner, the speedy sixth-inning batter, led off the eighth with an infield hit and Derek Jeter followed with an RBI double to end the night for Williams.

James O'Leary, the only player who had been in a playoff game with Texas before the season, came in with a 5-2 lead and walked the only two runners he faced.

New York's Alex Rodriguez, who had already struck out twice and made a sliding error in the eighth of his first home game, hit a grounder that bopped over Young's glove at third base. The single came against Quantrill, who faced only one batter and took the loss. AP

Kitchen kNight to the rescue of graveyard-shift employees

By Mark D. Salazar

AS IF THE drastic change in body clock is not enough, graveyard shift employees working in business-processing outsourcing (BPO) companies have to contend themselves with crackers and hardy sandwiches as during break time.

While mulling on a pack of biscuits, Liza Lin realized the absurdity of having to eat crackers after a hard night's work. Because the vendor's food delivery service (and equally decent food) at night, Lin decided enough was enough.

Out of her frustration, Kitchen Knight was born.

Lin launched her food delivery service March 2019. "At that time, my salary was not enough for me to afford good food," she recalls.

Even if she had the money, Lin says the "popular" food delivery services just offered the "usual" menu. Most of these are also closed during the wee hours, Lin points out.

Last July 28, Kitchen Knight started delivering to offices and residences within the areas of Makati and Taguig.

Lin is also a career woman on the go and knows that many like her prefer to eat out or order food.

Something else may be true for Lin since she has been a real estate broker and has been in the industry for five years now. Her job is demanding and so are her clients. "I'm on call more than eight hours a day," she says. "Clients are calling me at 7 a.m., 6 p.m., 10 p.m. but I'm not complaining."

Lin finished a degree in economics at the University of San Tomas and is taking up Masters in Applied Economics at the University of Asia and the Pacific. "I just have to balance this," she says.

Kitchen Knight's dishes range from Japanese, Korean and Thai, which she considers her personal favorites.

"I wanted to offer something different because I wanted something different as well," Lin says. Different, according to Lin, means meals other than sandwiches, burgers, french fries, and the good fast food.

More than the diversity of her listing the many food choices at night, Lin also wants to offer "healthier alternatives with the same convenience of a food delivery service." Kitchen Knight also wants customers to be fully satisfied with their meals.

Night after Lin goes home from her real estate job in Makati, she would head to her kitchen in Purok Tomas, Makati, where, together with a chef, she would prepare one course and ingredients while waiting for calls.

Lin says Kitchen Knight is open from 6 p.m. to 2 a.m. It requires a minimum pri-

1. Drink your cocktails at an ice bar

In Pattaya, two hours away from Bangkok by car, an ice bar stands (in a tropical country) where you can serve drinks with ice. At 5 Degrees below, we had to wear snow suits and gloves inside. The bar serves playful, delight-like drinks that are suitable for the weather. There are no umbrellas, flowers, or lights and no music. And if you're a little too chilly for you, there is an adjacent room to drink, which also serves cocktails and good liquor.

5 Degrees below is at 204 Moo 9, 5 Degrees below Pattaya, Chonburi. For more information, visit www.5degreesbelow.com or call 09-447-0700.

Baguio for non-tourists: the bookshop, the garden—and that raisin bread

By Elizabeth Lutaaga
Contributor

WHEN PEOPLE asked why we moved our printing facility to Baguio in 1992, my answer was "Not the flowers and to keep the children away from the roads as long as it's possible." When the same people learn that my adult daughters have now chosen to live and work in metropolitan Manila and ask why, my answer is a shrug and a smile. "They always have Baguio as their home to." When they do, they stay long enough to read, take walks and eat their fill of the things Baguio kids like to grow.

A resident out of my kids as they were growing up and getting around the city on their own. "They think of Baguio as their safe." That was how it began, they were.

I think of the city that way—a place, much like I can be on with bundles of reading materials by my side. When I feel hunger pangs and am too busy to cook, I can get up, slice a loaf of raisin bread, spread some jam on the side, burn a cup of Benguet coffee, eat while admiring the view of the dewy garden, framed by a window.

I know of one Manila who used to get up just to sleep. When another friend, starting with the idea of returning to Baguio, asked what she could take to them, I said, "Well, you can become a

The best way to explore London is on foot

NO CRASHING BICYCLE BOMBS

The London Underground is a vast, complex system of tunnels and tracks that runs beneath the city. It is a vital part of the city's infrastructure, providing a quick and easy way to get around. However, it is also a place where many accidents occur, particularly involving bicycles. In recent years, there has been a significant increase in the number of bicycle accidents on the Underground, with many people being injured or killed. This has led to a number of measures being taken to improve safety, including the introduction of new rules and regulations, and the installation of more barriers and signage. Despite these measures, the problem remains, and it is clear that more needs to be done to ensure the safety of all users of the Underground.

2. The next step is to check the network connection. This can be done by checking the status of the network adapter in the device manager.

3. If the network adapter is not working, it may be necessary to update the drivers or replace the hardware.

4. Another common cause of internet access issues is a firewall or security software that is blocking the connection.

5. It is also possible that the user's IP address is configured incorrectly.

6. Finally, the user should check the status of the internet service provider (ISP) to ensure that there are no outages or service disruptions.

For the purpose of this study, the authors used a convenience sample of 100 students from a large, public, urban university in the Midwest. The students were recruited from a variety of sources, including campus organizations, social media, and direct recruitment by the researchers. The sample was diverse in terms of age, gender, and ethnicity, and represented a range of academic backgrounds and interests. The study was approved by the university's Institutional Review Board (IRB) and all participants provided informed consent.

Building homes and banking relationships

By Joy Naga

IT DID phenomenally well with its recent offering, a home loan package with a low 6.99 percent interest rate plus waived loan fees to boot. Now, HSBC, "the world's local bank," makes itself even more with what Ron Logan, SVP and head of Personal Finance Services, likes to call a "sexy new rate." Have don't, a 5.99-percent home loan sound?

"It's obvious," says Logan. "Whether you're in the market for a big house, a small house, a condominium unit, or a property in an upscale subdivision, everybody gets the same benefit, equally."

With this home offer, new loan applicants enjoy a low 5.99-percent per annum under a one-year fixed or pricing scheme. Current clients also enjoy a discount on home loan rates for the life of the term. All HSBC Advance and HSBC Premier customers exclusively enjoy 0.25-percent and 1-percent off respectively on the prevailing standard home loan interest rate starting the next repricing period.

It's an offer that couldn't have come at a better time, as many Filipinos—those young,

With its commitment to look after clients for years to come, HSBC promises more than a home loan rate too good to pass up

Sex and Manansala

By Constantino C. Nijera

NATIONAL ARTIST Vicente Manansala is no rockfiddle. Of the 13 Madones, or, indeed, of his generation, he is probably the most up-front in depicting sex in art.

In the 1970s, even in his later years, and shortly before his death, he was receiving sexual imagery of the kind that we find only in the works of Jovito Solano, Eliseo Solano and Mark Mindesha (see previous pages). Such sexual energy reminds us of Picasso, who was depicting sex through his ink.

His drawings are more vitally anthropomorphic when it comes to the portrayal of sexuality in the visual arts (no doubt aided by extreme alcohol). He was somewhat joined when confronted by the erotica displayed in the recent exhibit "Si Manang Karing: Encountering Manansala" in the Tala Gallery of the Metropolitan Museum of Manila.

The biggest Manansala exhibit ever, with over 70 pieces from private collections, consisted in commemorating the National Artist's birth centenary this year. It had a whole section devoted to his nude studies and sexually

In smartphone wars, a new killer weapon

Nokia is fielding its new, feature-packed N8 to go head-to-head with iPhone4 and Android

By Gibby Cadiz

REPLACING THE CEO just days before a world could be designed to show off the organization in the best possible light might not be the wisest PR move for a company. But it could also be the best way to jolt itself into a new direction, and signal to the world it is serious about reclaiming lost ground.

Nokia was probably thinking this way when, three days before Nokia World, its annual global conference held in London this year with some 3,000 attendees, the Finnish phone giant abruptly announced that longtime president Olli-Pekka Kallioinen was stepping down and handing the reins to a new CEO—Stephen Elop of Canada, a former Microsoft executive.

Given the timing of the transition, the London event looked out, in many ways, to be a coronation to come, a new rally designed not only to reinvigorate the spirit of Nokia's hundreds of thousands of employees and affiliated application developers, retailers, publishers and business partners worldwide, but also to reassure skeptics elsewhere, fairly questioned Nokia's ability to continue to deliver trailblazing products and technology in the face of onslaught by Apple and other mobile brands.

The International Herald Tribune has reported that "Nokia's share price has declined more than half since Apple introduced its iPhone in 2007," so it didn't come up with a compelling response to what is now the world's best-selling smartphone.

But, while Sillanpaa himself, Nokia Mobile executive vice president, welcomed Elop to his company, he said "Nokia is going through a tough, challenging period...we're not going to apologize for the fact that we're not Apple or Google or Samsung. We're Nokia."

Leading players

The company maintains that, despite the iPhone's sky-high popularity and Google's Android platform gaining its fair share of users, Nokia's phones and their Symbian OS remain the leading players in the marketplace. Nokia may not be regarded as when it comes to trendy smartphones at the time, but it's not about to cede as much of ground in the phone wars, much less leave the mobile flag.

"Let's not see the current situation," said Sillanpaa. "Everyday some 260,000 new Nokia smartphones are bought. That's more sales than any other company in the world. And that's more than the sales of iPhone and Android combined."

"Nokia, not Google, also leads in map navigation in Our Maps," he added. "We now have 35 countries covered, in 44 languages. Unlike Google, Our Maps features pedestrian navigation, and it's far less data-hungry because it's optimized for phones."

The project is in line with Bruce's Filipino Dream to bring art, music and dance to the people, instead of the other way around. The mall is sure very much a part of urban Filipino life, and Ayala is taking advantage of this by using its malls as venues for cultural performances.

These are made with comfortable and hypo-allergenic materials by trusted brands like Bedtime Baby, Disney Baby, Cuddly for Baby, Fisher-Price, and Owen.
